The Chamber of Commerce of Campbell, California, the leading business and civic organization of a substantial and progressive town held its regular monthly meeting. Less than seven members were present. This being less than a quorum, no official business could be transacted.

Tonight, the same Chamber of Commerce held another monthly meeting. This time five, out of the eighty members were present. Still no quorum. The discussion at tonight's meeting was a consideration of the Soviet form of government and business.

Probably without exception, the entire eighty membery of the Chamber of Commerce, look down upon the Russian government and the Soviet policies as inferior to our own, and possibly dangerous. They look upon this experiment and dismiss the men conducting it as fools and murderers, Red radicals and bomb throwers. But when the Soviet government calls a meeting to discuss affairs of the nation, state or community, these fools and bomb throwers attend a hundred percent. They show an interest in their government, what ever kind of a government it is. They are keenly interested in the workings of the state and in its relation to their own community.

And we in Campbell sit scoffing a government that attends to its own business. We don't think the Soviet form of government the best, or anywhere near as good as our own, but even from the poorest group something valuable can be learned.

Certainly Campbell, in the midst of the finest country should pay some attention to its affairs. Especially is this true in times of difficulty, times that demand something more than the usual easy-going manner. The Chamber of Commerce has continually asked for the support of the community in many drives, organizations and in various works and the citizens have replied adequately. But how can the Chamber of Commerce have the presumption to ask co-operation from others when, at two consequtive meetings, less than ten percent have even enough interest to attend. If the members of that organization look upon Russia as a trade menace; deplor the lack of community support; complain about any feeling of community depression or find themselves without the respect of the community, they have no one to blame but themselves. It is such things as this that are continuing the depression beyond its necessary economic limits.

A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune has been interviewing some of the big bankers in New York of the type commonly called international bankers, that is bankers who have been floating in this country large loans to foreign governments and industries, and in doing so have done immeasurable damage to the industrial and financial interests of the United States. This correspondent says that these bankers realize that at this time they are about as popular as the proverbial polecat at a Sunday school picnic. They are, however, bent on continuing the policy of making foreign financial stability and prosperity the first concern of the American government.

Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan and company, America's biggest private banking firm, says that in view of the position of the United States as overwhelmingly the world's greatest creditor nation, it is up to us to put Europe in position to pay her debts to us in goods, by scaling down our tariff. This would of course permit foreign cheap labor production to displace to a greater extent than under the present inadequate protective law, the output of better paid American labor.

America is not so much of a creditor nation as our international bankers seem to assume. We hold the obligations of European governments for money loaned them during the World war, but the value of these obligations, even after scaling them down one-half, is questionable. It is probable that American bankers who have taken a second trust mortgage on Europe in private loans at high rates of interest, will be able to get the first mortgage cancelled at the expense of the taxpayers of America in order that these foolishly taken second mortgages may be made good or at least better off than they are now.

In our dealings with foreign nations the international account is practically even. During the fiscal year 1929-30 the debit and credit accounts of America with the

HONOR ROLL STUDENTS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Beginning this year, honor students at Campbell Union High school are chosen according to the number of honor points received.

Pupils receiving a grade of A in a subject receive five honor points. A grade of B gives three honor points, and a grade of C is rewarded with one point.

The highest possible score is made by a student carrying five subjects and getting an A in each, a total of 25 points.

Another example would be that of a student receiving two A's and two B's and a C. He would receive ten points for the two A's, six points for the two B's, and one for the C, a total of 17 points.

The scholarship committee of the faculty, consisting of Mrs. Hummel, Mrs. Rae, Mrs. Dart, and Mr. Best, decided to include on the honor roll all those who have made an honor score of at least 15 points.

The honor roll for the first quarter follows:

25 points—Philip Farley.

23 points—Dennis Bennett, Hugh Cramer, Muriel Knowles.

21 points—Eiene Berry.

20 points—Clifton Crothers, Dorothea Willis.

19 points—Katherine Seko.

18 points — Marguerite Bohrman, Lula Caldwell, Milo Kiperash, Mary Korotaj, Lois Lloyd, Mary Onishi.

17 points—Sylvia Best, Bernice Murty, Elizabeth Mumma.

16 points—Mario Angelesco, Agnes Criscione, George Ono, Wilma Taylor, Sal Tercsi.

15 points—Maxine Bouchard, Betty Keesling, Robert Knopi, Richard Morton, Virginia Persico.

The New Congress Goes to Work

Theresa Brydon Newly Elected Noble Grand

At the meeting of the Ada Rebekah lodge tonight Theresa Brydon was elected Noble Grand for the ensuing term. Lois Rice was elected vice-grand; Josephine LaBarbera, recording secretary; June Rice, financial secretary; Wilmay Lea, treasurer and Emma Bulmore, trustee. The social hour was in charge of a committee composed entirely of the men of the lodge. Installation of new officers will take place the first part of January.

The district meeting of the nine lodges was held in San Jose at the I. O. O. F. Hall last Friday evening with the three lodges of San Jose, the Santa Clara, Sunnyvale, Los Gatos, Cupertino, Saratoga and Campbell lodges represented.

Lucy E. Dake, president of the Rebekah assembly was the guest of honor and the installing staff of District 3 composed entirely of members of the Campbell lodge presented her with a beautiful bouquet and a gold piece.

A beautiful ceremony, all of which was original, entitled "Bouquet of Love", was given by the Campbell installing staff with Lillian Ohlen presenting the honor guest with the gifts. Miss Josephine LaBarbera sang the dedication song, "Bouquet of Love", the words being written by herself. Lillian Ohlen was general chairman of the meeting committees from the various lodges exemplified the work of their lodge.

A reception, with a fine program was presented followed by a banquet. Mrs. Dake also held a school of instruction.

RECORD CROWD ATTENDS LOCAL SHOW OPENING

Campbell's new talking picture house, the Campbell Vitaphone theater, opened last Friday with "Five Star Final," Edward G. Robinson's great starring vehicle. Welcomed by many movie fans of the city, with a packed house that had Standing Room Only, the newly renovated theater started serving Campbell with the latest and most widely known films.

Due to an unfortunate mistake, Warner Bros. sent the wrong synchronizing records for the films. Because of this the management gave return checks and offered the same program Saturday night, with the addition of the musical film, "The Desert Song."

At the opening performance, E. J. Mayer, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was master of ceremonies and the presentation address, opening the new house to the public, was made by William Fisher.

The theater will open again Thursday night with "The Star Witness," featuring Walter Huston and Chic Sale. This highly successful show will also be given Friday night. Chic Sale gives another of his splendid characterizations as Grandpa Summervil and he did so well that, during the filming of the picture in Hollywood, the property boys, laborers and even the other players were continually offering to get some water, or for him to take a rest. They, as well as most audiences, were completely taken in by his great make-up.

Following "The Star Witness," Buck Jones will perform in "Branded," his exciting western story. This will be given Saturday. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday are the dates now set for "Dirigible," featuring Jack Holt and Ralph Graves. This picture takes its rightful place alongside "Submarine" and "Flight," the other two starring pictures of Holt and Graves.

Grand Patriarch To Visit Local Lodge Wednesday

A meeting of the Barnes Encampment No. 77 of the I. O. O. F. will be held at the hall tomorrow evening. Guy Troxel of Burlingame, grand patriarch, will make his official visit. This visit s made every four years to determine what progress has been made by the various encampments. During his visit here Mr. Troxel will inspect the various fraternity officials and their work in Odd Fellow circles. Frank Coupland, chief patriarch of the local order, asks that all members be present at this meeting.

We and Our Neighbors Club Plan Xmas Party

At the recent meeting of the We and Our Neighbors club at the clubhouse the presidents of the federated clubs of Santa Clara county were present. Among the presidents present who gave brief talks was Mrs. George Page, who spoke on nature study.

The club voted to give a Christmas party Saturday, Dec. 19 at the club house. A supper will be served at 6 p. m. followed by a program which is being arranged by Mrs. Freeman Howes. Reservations must be made by Wednesday, Dec. 16 with Mrs. A. Cilker.

Keesling Okays Local Newspapers At Grange Meet

"Publicity and Gardening" was the subject of a speech made by Horace Keesling before the Orchard City Grange last Tuesdty night at the Odd Fellows Hall. In his speech, Mr. Keesling advocated the broader use of the local newspapers in better acquainting the general public in the work being done by the Grangers in furthering the agricultural activities of the communities.

Mr. E. W. Allen gave a brief lecture on Prune Marketing and Louis Shelley did a number of slight of hand tricks to amuse the large gathering. Several plans concerning the Grange building fund were discussed at a round table talk held later in the evening.

U. C WILL OPEN RADIO PROGRAMS THURSDAY NIGHT

Berkeley, Dec. 1—The University of California will open its radio programs Thursday night from remote control stations on its campuses at Berkeley and Los Angeles. The evening program, which inaugurates these presentations, will be given each Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock, it is announced by Harold Ellis, manager of the University News Service, in charge of the radio program.

In the northern part of the state listeners can hear the program over KPO; in southern California KMTR will bring the programs to alumni and friends of the institution. Donald Blanchard is to direct the programs at Berkeley, and Hale Sparks will conduct the presentations at Los Angeles. The programs will be nearly identical and will occur at the same periods over both stations.

In addition to the evening programs, there will be a program for women each morning at 9:45. Beginning December 15, an agricultural program, to be given as a part of the Western Farm and Home hour of the United States department of agriculture, will be given Tuesdays and Thursdays at 12:15 o'clock.

Opening Thursday night's program here, Ellis will explain briefly the purpose of the broadcasts and Dr. Paul F. Cadman, secretary of the San Francisco stock exchange, an alumnus of the university and formerly one of its faculty, will speak. Music will be furnished by the University of California Glee club under the direction of Eugene Blanchard. At Los Angeles, William C. Marsh will open the program and Provost and Vice-President E. C. Moore of the University of California at Los Angeles, will speak.

On Friday morning, Dr. Herbert R. Stolz, director of the Institute of Child Welfare, will give the first of a series of five Friday morning talks on "The Study of Children at the University of California." On Saturday morning, a book review for women will be given. Prof. Mary F. Patterson, of the Household Art department, will speak Monday morning on "The Problem of Artistic Lighting." On Tuesday morning, the Home Economics department of the University of California at Los Angeles will offere the first of a series on "The Modern Homemaker—Her Responsibilities and Helps the University Has to Offer."

Japanese Armies on Move Again While League Council Stumbles—Raskob Irritates the Drys—National Political Gossip.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

NEITHER Japan nor China was willing to accept the plan devised by the League of Nations council for an inquiry into the Manchurian situation, and the twelve members of that body made a further attempt to draw up a scheme that would please both sides, but without apparent success. The salient point of this latter plan was the sending of a "committee of study" to Manchuria, only instead of having an express mandate for investigating all of China as well as Manchuria, as the recent Japanese proposal provided, the committee would be instructed to investigate Manchuria and to include China if they think it advisable. As demanded by the Japanese, the committee would have no power to investigate troop movements or to interfere otherwise with the war, nor to intervene in any direct negotiations between Tokyo and Nanking that might be opened.

Gen. C. P. Summerall

Dr. Alfred Sze, in an uncompromising communication to the council, told how China looked on this scheme. He said:

"An inquiry without at the same time providing for immediate cessation of hostilities and the withdrawal of Japanese forces becomes a mere device to condone and perpetuate for a more or less indefinite period the unjustifiable occupation of China's territory by an aggressor who has already virtually attained his unlawful object while these discussions have been going on. In the circumstances you will readily see it is quite impossible for me to consider the proposal in question until the basis above mentioned has been adequately laid down."

When and if a committee of inquiry is named, its chairman may be Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former chief of staff of the United States army. He has been suggested for this place by the Japanese and probably would be acceptable to China.

Still another plan for solving the Manchurian problem was to be submitted to the council by the Nanking government, according to Dr. Wellington Koo, who has just been appointed Japanese foreign minister and assumed his new duties.

DOWN on the southern coast of Manchuria is a small strip in which is situated the city of Chinchow, and that is still in the hands of China—or was last week. But evidently the Japanese decided to take over this area also, for Doctor Sze gave the league council information that the troops of the mikado were moving south from Mukden in armored cars with the intention of crushing the opposition in Chinchow. This action was explained by the Japanese on the ground that their interessts there were menaced by bandits, but the Chinese assert the activities of bandits there and elsewhere in Manchuria are promoted by Japan to excuse their militant course.

Gen. Jiro Minami

Despite reports of dissension in the Japanese cabinet, it is apparent that the militarists, led by Gen. Jiro Minami, minister of war, are having their own way. They will not permit withdrawal of the troops from Manchuria, nor are they afraid of exasperating the Soviet Russian government to the point of forceful action although always assuring Moscow that Russian interests will not be endangered.

Seeming efforts of the league council in Paris to put on the United States the onus of settling the Sino-Japanese affair are not meeting with success. There has been talk there and in Washington of invoking an economic boycott of Japan if the Tokyo government persists in refusing to keep the peace, and our government has been approached on the subject.

"The league is asking us to commit ourselves before it makes up its own mind what it wants us to be committed to," an official in Washington declared. "We're not going to do it."

COMPLETION of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway in 1932 instead of in May, 1933, with a view to assisting business, industry and employment, was asked of the federal government by the Mississippi Valley association at its annual convention in St. Louis. Senators Glenn and Lewis of Illinois and many others spoke in favor of speeding up the construction work, and argued that the objections raised by the army engineers to a quick finish—ice and possible floods—would not be considered valid if the waterway were a private enterprise instead of a government project. The association voted in favor of a federal bond issue to carry on the work rapidly.

Senator Glenn recently urged upon President Hoover and secretary of War Hurley the need of early completion of the work, and said he violated no confidence in declaring both of them were in favor of this course.

HEARINGS by the senate lobby committee were resumed in Washington, and John Holland, the committee's chief investigator, told an interesting story of deals in sugar stock by two United States senators—Watson of Indiana and Davis of Pennsylvania. Both of them, Holland said, bought stock of sugar companies operated by Bror G. Dahlberg of Chicago, giving their notes in payment, and later turned in the stock for considerable paper profits, which afterwards disappeared. Other prominent men, he said, also bought Dahlberg stock and lost, these included Al Smith, John J. Raskob and Senator Moses. Holland told the committee he could find no evidence that Senator Davis had lobbied for a high sugar tariff. Dahlberg in Chicago denied that there was anything unusual or reprehensible in the transactions with Watson and Davis, and also declared false the rumor that he had made a gift of $10,000 to Davis.

STIRRING up the animals is a favorite occupation of John J. Raskob, the dynamic chairman of the Democratic national committee. His latest achievement in that way is the sending out of a questionnaire to 88,580 contributers to the party campaign fund of 1928 to get their views of whether the Democratic national convention should declare for resubmission of the prohibition issue to the people. They are also asked what they think on other matters of party policy, but the liquor proposition is the main one.

J. J. Raskob

Needless to say, Mr. Raskob himself is thoroughly wet, and as he says in his letter to contributors, he believes the time has come "for the Democratic party to face this issue squarely and to present to the people a definite plan under the policy of states' rights and local self-government."

The move was a follow-up of his presentation of the home-rule plan for liquor control last March to the national committee. He evoked then a bitter outburst, particularly from southern leaders, many of whom felt deliberate injection of the prohibition issue was a fine way to wreck the party's 1932 prospects.

This time the drys again responded with strong protests. Their board of strategy, of which Edwin C. Dinwiddie is executive secretary, issued a statement which said "wet millionaires" were bringing pressure to bear on both parties to make their platforms wet by threatening to withdraw contributions in the 1932 contest.

Some New Yorkers saw in the Raskob questionnaire a deliberate effort to split the support of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who is still the leading contender for the Presidential nomination. Senators Robinson of Arkansas, Hull of Tennessee and Connally of Texas, interviewed in Washington, decried Rasjob's efforts.

The Democratic national committee has been called to meet January 9, and this matter undoubtedly will be a major topic of discussion.

REPRESENTATIVE GARNER of Texas, prospective speaker of the next house, partook of a "harmony breakfast" with John F. Curry, chieftain of Tammany Hall, the other day, and it is said persuaded him to abandon his plan to have a member of the Tammany delegation made floor leader.

The inter-party truce was completed when Representative John McDuffie of Alabama withdrew from the race for floor leadership. Immediately thereafter Representative Henry T. Rainey, seventy-one-year-old veteran from Illinois, publicly announced his candidacy and word went down the line that he had the active support of Representative Garner. Mr. Rainey claimed he already has been pledged 133 of the 217 Democratic votes.

Democratic control of the house was clinched by the election of R. M. Kleberg, Democrat, in the Fourteenth Texas district to succeed the late Harry M. Wurzbach, who was the state's only Republican congressman.

PROGRESSIVE and independent members of the house expect to wield control of its actions, and at the call of Representative LaGuardia of New York those in that category, both Republicans and Democrats, met Wednesday in Washington to make their plans and formulate their demands. The invitation to this conference, which was signed also by Paul J. Kvale of Minnesota, the lone Farmer-Laborite, said that even though the Democrats might elect the speaker, neither they nor the Republicans could hope for a working majority without the aid of the Independents. One of the demands of the progressives is liberalization of the house rules so that "boss control" may be eliminated.

MEMBERS of the senate who are classed as progressive Republicans were reported to be organizing for opposition to the re-election of Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire as president pro tempore of the senate. They are said to be actuated especially by Moses' attack on them a year ago, when he dubbed them "sons of the wild jackass." Nye of North Dakota, Norris of Nebraska and Couzens of Michigan were supposed to be leading the movement and it was believed they would support Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington for the place held by Moses. The regular Republican leaders feared all this might result in allowing the Democrats to assume control of the senate as well as of the house.

THERE is an unfilled vacancy among federal judgships in the Chicago division of the eastern Illinois district, and George E. Q. Johnson, United States district attorney there, is strongly urged for the place by Senator Otis F. Glenn, Illinois. The appointment of Mr. Johnson would be political in some ways, but it also would be approved as a reward for the excellent work he has done in the line of prosecuting gangsters and grafting politicians for evasion of their income taxes. Senator Glenn denied that he had yet made any recommendation to the President, but other supporters of Mr. Johnson were insistent that he should be appointed now, though he has three years to serve as district attorney, and Mr. Hoover, it was reported, wants him to finish his term.

George E. Q. Johnson

If Mr. Johnson is elevated to the bench, his successor is likely to be Dwight H. Green, who, though only thirty-four years old, has been one of the district attorney's most efficient and valued assistants in the prosecution of tax dodgers.

IF THE Democrats in senate and house follow the leadership of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, their leader in the senate, they will oppose any increase in surtaxes and any great increase in any of the government levies. Robinson says such action by congress would "approach confiscation" and would be likely to prolong instead of relieve the depression. He proposes a bond issue.

Senator Robinson argues that taxes should be raised solely to obtain revenue and not for the purpose "of distributing wealth or reducing large fortunes." He is opposed to a general sales tax, but would consent to a sales levy on luxuries. He said in his statement:

"The most practical method to diminish unemployment is to revive industry. Increase in taxation is a poor method for overcoming depression. In other words, while increases may be unavoidable they cannot be expected to contribute to the forces calculated to restore confidence and courage in the sphere of investments and enterprises."

He added that while he recognized the necessity of balancing the budget, he did not look for a great reduction in public expenditures.

THOUGH he is now eighty-eight years old, Gen. A. W. Greely is still actively interested in the exploration of polar regions and he has just been appointed chairman of the national committee that sponsors a new American expedition which will start for the Arctic next June to spend two years on Ellesmere island, the northernmost land on the globe. Capt. Flavel M. Williams will be commander of the party, and Dr. H. B. Maris will be its scientific director, and the gray-bearded leader of the ill-fated Greely expedition of 1881-1884 is helping them make their plans. They will have radios, airplanes and modern comforts in exploring the region where General Greely met with disaster and where eighteen of his party starved or froze to death because they had no means of letting civilization know of their plight.

CURRENT COMMENT

rest of the world were approximately even—about ten billion dollars each way. America makes nothing net out of these transactions; it is only an even swap. It is important that this country should be kept in position to pay out this ten billion dollars as that other countries should be put in position to pay us their ten billion dollars. This situation does not seem to indicate that we are after all "overwhelmingly" a creditor nation.

As for sacrificing American wages, standards of living and employment in order to enable our international bankers to collect what they loaned Europe, in the face of the precarious political and economic conditions prevailing there, in preference to investing it at lower rates of interest in the United States, there are many who feel that so great a sacrifice of national well-being to private interests is uncalled for. It is true that these vast sums cannot be lost without doing harm in the United States, but it is better that a few Americans should lose money unwisely invested abroad, than that hundreds of thousands of Americans should lose their jobs in order that foreigners may earn the money to pay off their debts to these investors.

Most unemployment now existing in the United States is due to the displacement of American production by foreign productions based on a cheapness which is at the same time paralyzing consuming power in Europe, and therefore presenting insuperable obstacles to recovery on that continent. America will not help the rest of the world by destroying the consuming power of its workers through exposing them to unfair competition with lower foreign wage and living standards.

It is announced that a number of high power radio stations have been erected in England at enormous expense for the purpose of carrying on international broadcasts. If Europe, which claims to be financially embarrassed and is constantly demanding that the United States pay the full cost of the World war on that account, would spend more money on legitimate domestic development and less on propaganda to induce other nations to sacrifice their own interests in behalf of the nations doing the broadcasting, there would doubtless be a better prospect of peace and prosperity in the world.
